

JAMIE LOFARO

ADVISORY BOARD MEMBER, COMMUNITY COLLEGE OF DENVER

Jamie Lofaro is a retired educator who spent nearly her entire career working for the Denver Public Schools. As a teacher and administrator, she worked almost exclusively in Title I schools, choosing to provide opportunities to communities who traditionally had few. As a principal, she led an alternative school and an early college that partnered directly with the Community College Denver (CCD). Jamie is a staunch advocate of CCD's programming, believing that practical experience, career education, certificate programming, and two year degrees open a world of possibilities to many people.
